

THE SUCCESS OF THE
Two English Travellers

146

Newly arrived in London.

To a New Irish Tune.

AS we was a Ranging
upon the Salt Seas,
For France and for Spain,
our humours to please ;
But when we came there,
the first News we did hear,
Was, you Rebels of England
what do you do here.

When we was a walking along in the street,
Both Men, Wives and Children,
and all we did meet,
They gathered up stones,
and at us did fling, Cry'd Rebels of England,
you murther'd your King.

All this being odious
unto our own hearts,
Then from the French
we were forc'd to depart ;
The French did deride us,
with scornful disdain,
We hoised up Top-sail
and sailed for Spain.

But when we came there,
we'd not set foot on Land,
But strait they perceiv'd that we were English Men,
With their hands on their Rapiers their Cloaks off did fling, Crying Rebels of England,
you murther'd your King.

All this being odious
unto our conceits,
We hoised and hastened
up into the Straits ;
Next Port unto Venice,
intending to go,
Not fearing nor dreading
they did of it know.

But when we came there,
our Ships they did scan,
They saw by our Colours,
we were English Men,
O they laugh'd in their Lingo,
and at us did fleer ;
You Rebels of England
what do you do here ?

Thus twenty years wandring
from Sea-port to Town,
In all parts abused,
resolv'd to turn home :
We steer'd up for London,
but when we came there,
The Court all in Mourning,
put us in despair.

Then great Charles of England,
we found was interr'd,
And some known Offenders
in Mourning appear'd ;
Who for some years together,
had design'd and swore,
To serve him as they did his Father before.

Great James of his Birth-right,
they sought to depose,
But now for ten Guineys you'll find none of those,
King James is Established
safe in his Throne,
And none shall invade the just Rights of the Crown.

And now we're resolved
in England to stay,
And wait for to serve,
and our King to obey,
And his Royal Consort,
Queen Mary's blest Name :
And we'll drive both the French,
and the Dutch o're the Main.
